

RYCA

Born 1981

Lives London

RYCA (Rye-ka) is a young artist from the east end of London who has taken a less than orthodox route into the art world. Studying Industrial model making and 3D Design at college, RYCA learnt to screen print at an industrial level. Having been working as a sign designer/fabricator for the past seven years, you will probably have seen his handiwork without even knowing it outside many of Londons' (and UK nationwide) pubs.

RYCA divides his artistic activities between making his increasingly sought after print editions, paintings, multimedia works and various glass pieces. Initially influenced by stencil graffiti and pop culture icons he is increasingly exploring new ways to expand his ideas and incorporate his 3D skills into his artwork. RYCA also runs and publishes (exclusive) other artists work through his gallery SQUARITY.
